

Cleaner Electricity for Many Contra Costa Communities Starting in April

If you live in Concord, Danville, Martinez, Moraga, Oakley, Pinole, Pittsburg, San Ramon, or unincorporated Contra Costa County you can expect to see a change on your PG&E bill beginning in April, when the communities listed above will join the cities of Walnut Creek, Lafayette, Richmond, San Pablo, and El Cerrito in receiving electricity from MCE. MCE is a not-for-profit, community-owned agency that provides electricity from more renewable sources at stable, competitive rates. The County Board of Supervisors and City Councils voted last year to join MCE. With the addition of these Contra Costa communities, Contra Costa County jurisdictions are the largest group of MCE customers and voting shares on the MCE Board.

MCE determines the power source, or electric generation. PG&E will continue to deliver the electricity, maintain power lines, provide repairs and send your monthly bill. Your bill will now show separate line items for PG&E electric delivery and MCE electric generation. MCE's generation charges replace PG&E's generation charges; they are not an added fee.

MCE offers choices of 50% to 100% renewable energy at rates set its Board of Directors, which is comprised of local elected officials from member jurisdictions.

If you live in one of the participating communities, you will start receiving information from MCE about the upcoming switch. All customers will be enrolled in MCE's "Light Green" 50% renewable option in April, unless you choose to sign up for MCE's Deep Green 100% renewable energy product, or opt out and remain entirely with PG&E.

All County accounts in the participating cities and unincorporated County will begin taking service from MCE in April.
